Short bio: Eric's first stamp in his passport came before his first birthday and he's been traveling ever since. He's explored the souks of Morocco, trekked across Botswana's Okavango Delta and perused the floating markets in Bangkok. Over the past 10 years, he's visited nearly 40 countries and stayed in over 100 luxury hotels and properties. Prior to founding Discover 7, Eric worked in client services at The Carlyle Hotel, The Pierre and The Four Seasons Hotel Philadelphia. He also designed bespoke travel experiences as an advisor for Frosch Travel. Recently, Eric founded a social networking company designed to match like-minded travelers from around the globe. He currently resides in New York City and enjoys playing basketball, golf, and is an aviation enthusiast and pilot.

How often do you fly? Once or twice per month.

How many countries have you been to? About 50.

How many continents have you been to? 6, nervous about the spotty Wi-Fi on the 7th.

Earliest travel memory: Traveling with my parents to London in second grade.

Favorite American city: New York, can't go wrong with home.

Favorite international city: Paris, you can never go back too many times.

Least favorite country: Ukraine.

I have no desire to go to: There is nowhere that I don't want to explore!

Friendliest people in the world: The people of Bhutan.

Country with the meanest immigration officers: Russia.
